HONG KONG, 28 February 2014 – Man Wah, Mandarin Oriental, Hong Kong's Michelin-starred Cantonese restaurant situated on the 25th floor, will once again excite gastronomes by introducing a delicate duo of Michelin-starred Cantonese cuisine and premium sake. Between 31 March and 4 April, Saori Suzuki, Sake Sommelier from Mandarin Oriental, Tokyo will visit Man Wah to share with guests her knowledge, skills and style as they enjoy an exceptional dinner menu with seven courses that will be individually paired with the carefully selected sake, all of the highest calibre in the world of the Japan's national drink. Dishes on offer will include drunken prawn with sake wine paired with Nanbubijin Daiginjo, wok-fried Japanese amadai with braised spring onion and chilli sauce paired with Tamagawa Omachi Junmaiginjo, and seared Miyazaki beef with spring vegetables paired with Dewazakura Dewasansan Junmaiginjoshu, amongst others. The price of this exquisite seven-course sake-pairing menu is HKD1,688 + 10% service charge, and will be available for dinner nightly. The list of premium sake will also be available throughout the promotion for guests of Man Wah to order separately.

“Sake does not have to be enjoyed with just traditional Japanese food; it is equally good with other cuisines,” said Nicolas Dubort, Director of Food & Beverage. “We are keen to share an unparalleled culinary experience with our guests and introduce them the appreciation of Cantonese cuisine and sake pairing.”
