Top Tips On What To Do In Shanghai This Spring

Fashion is an Attitude

Stylishly dressed fashionistas are making bold statements on the streets of Shanghai this spring. The fashion spotlight will shine on the city once again as the world's en vogue brands, designers, celebrities and couture lovers celebrate new season style at runway events during Shanghai Fashion Week from 7-13 April.

Where The End Starts

The compelling KAWS: Where The End Starts exhibition at Yuz Museum West Bund from 28 March to 13 August is the artist's first showcase in Asia. Inspired by the worlds of graffiti, pop art and consumer culture, Brooklyn-based KAWS will exhibit a charged body of work produced over 20 years, with each piece conveying his underlying wit, irreverence and affection for our times.

Formula One Returns

The high-octane F1 Grand Prix returns to the Shanghai International Circuit (SIC) on 8-9 April. The SIC design is inspired by the Chinese character 'shang, 上', featuring a long right-hander which opens each lap, through which the drivers turn more than 270 degrees before switching back to create a challenging and exciting format. Tickets are on sale now and the hotel concierge can tailor your arrangements to enhance the F1 experience.

Top Spots in Shanghai for Sakura (Cherry Blossom)

April is the best time to visit Shanghai to enjoy the romance of blossoming cherry trees. Abundant cherry blossom spectacles can be found at Century Park, Gucun Park, Lu Xun Park, Tongji University and Chenshan Botanical Gardens. For sakura aficionados, the hotel's concierge can arrange an unforgettable day trip to Nanhui on the outskirts of Shanghai, which hosts a famous Cherry and Peach Blossom Festival each April.
