RONNEFELDT

As a tea company with a noble manufacturing tradition, our main challenges occur along the prior and subsequent stages of the supply chain. The procurement of our commodities is subject to the strictest conditions and quality standards. We purchase most of our teas through national and international dealers, as well as directly from tea gardens in the countries of origin, including India, Japan and Colombia. Most of the herbs, fruits, spices, and flowers for our tea recipes, however, are bought from German and Austrian companies which obtain some of the products from regions of origin such as Croatia, Poland, India or Thailand, from where they make their way to Germany. Thus, the tea covers long distances before we can refine and enjoy it in Germany.

Most of our flavourings are obtained from a medium-sized supplier in Germany. We primarily buy tea packaging and all other materials that are closely connected to tea from German companies. Non-food items such as China, Matcha accessories or product displays and foods such as fine pastries and sugar are bought from international suppliers.

The Bartender

Who Started It All

Jeremiah "Jerry" P. Thomas (October 30, 1830–December 15, 1885) was an American bartender who owned and operated saloons in New York City. Because of his pioneering work in popularizing cocktails across the United States as well, he is considered "the father of American mixology".

In addition to writing the seminal work on cocktails, Bar-Tender's Guide, Thomas displayed creativity and showmanship while preparing drinks and established the image of the bartender as a creative professional.

As such, he was often nicknamed "Professor" Jerry Thomas.
