Hotel Fan

Antique European fan, indicative of its colorful past, when French fashion trends made their mark within Munich society in the late 19th century and French art dominated Europe. Created by the House of Alexandre in 1870/80, the fan is intricately painted on both sides with a scene depicting French bourgeoisie at a countryside picnic and features mother-of-pearl sticks.

Rooms & Suites: Each of the 48 guest rooms and 25 suites enjoys a well-orchestrated mix of styles, colours and patterns, combining furniture with historic heritage with a fresh and contemporary look and colour scheme. New art concepts grace each room, featuring individual mountain images by local artist Felix Rehfeld, paying tribute to Munich's geographical location as the gateway to the Alps. The art in all suites include a mountain massif exclusively produced for the hotel by Royal Bavarian porcelain manufacturer, Nymphenburg. As part of a new inroom amenity concept, all single-use plastic items the rooms and bathrooms have been replaced with sustainable alternatives.

The luxurious Grand Presidential (325m2), Presidential (120m2) and Panoramic Suite (65 m2) also provide a winter garden, creating an airy, light-flooded atmosphere as well as unique views of the cityscape and landmarks.

The high-ceilinged guest bathrooms have been completely re-designed and now feature an elegant black-and-white colour scheme in polished stone. All bathrooms are equipped with walk-in shower, separate bathtub, toilet and bidet as well as underfloor heating.

As part of the new amenity concept all single-use plastic in guest and bathroom have been replaced by sustainable alternatives.

Room Features:

King-size beds with down comforters, crisp linens and cotton chintz bedspreads ensure highest comfort, while bespoke furniture, carpets as well as original artwork add to the hotel's elegant and fresh ambience.

INVITA Hospitality Projects by BAULINK lead the entire project from design to completion. The Swiss based design-company implemented a coordinated mix of styles, colours and patterns, giving historical-style furniture a fresh, contemporary look, all combined with a contemporary colour scheme. The company worked with renowned brands such as Ligne Roset, the Bavarian-based and family-run carpenter Felix Graf and House of Tai Ping, the renowned Hong Kong-based manufacturer of textile floor coverings.

In addition to state-of-the-art technology in every room and suite, guests will find a variety of newly introduced amenities and services, ranging from inspiring coffee table books curated by well-known Munich-based publishing house Callwey, locally produced biodegradable coffee capsules for Nespresso machines to personalised butler service.

Private Events & Meetings:

On the first floor, Mandarin Oriental, Munich offers three rooms for private events and meetings with up to 150 people. All of the spaces benefit from natural daylight, air conditioning, high speed internet and wireless LAN.
